DR. CHIOMA ANYIKWA, MD

"The epitome of greatness"

Dr. Anyikwa was raised in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida and is of Nigerian and Jamaican descent. Since high school Chioma knew she wanted to be a doctor because of her passion for science and mentorship. Dr. Anyikwa attended Spelman College for three years before being selected by the Early Medical School Selection Program (EMSSP) offered by Boston University School of Medicine where she graduated in May of 2019. Dr. Anyikwa is in residency at the University of Maryland specializing in Family Medicine. She plans to further her career by focusing on Women's Health and Adolescent Medicine.

DR. MYRON ROLLE, MD

"From suiting up to scrubbing up"

Dr. Rolle is from Princeton, New Jersey. Growing up in a Bahamian American household- he excelled in the classroom and in many extracurricular activities such as Track & Field, Basketball, School Band and Football. Shortly after high school, he attended Florida State University where he played football. He was then drafted to the NFL in 2010 where he played for the Tennessee Titans. Always having a love for medicine and football, he wanted his two worlds to coexist; he wanted to find the correlation of repetitive concussions and traumatic brain injuries. He left the NFL in 2013 to attend Florida State University College of Medicine. Currently he is in the Neurosurgery Residency Program at Harvard Medical School and Massachusetts General Hospital.
